Dear AHCCCS,

Regarding the Centene/WellCare merger, I would say there are two primary advantages: First, each plan will bring unique strengths that the other likely does not have. This combining of strengths, if done well, has the potential to better support member health. Second, it would reduce the administrative burdens to providers by reducing the number of plans providers interface with. This will save time in many ways, and therefore money, from the provider perspective. The lean principle of reducing "muda" or waste would be apparent here.

Thank you for asking for input.

Sincerely,

Larry
